

High-level Political Forum: Changing approaches to Policy Making: the role of the Sustainable Development Goals

5th meeting, June 30, 2015

Thank you for the questions. This is Nausheen from Bangladesh representing Khan Foundation and the Women's Major Group. One way to balance the local, national and regional and to measure the achievement of the SDGs is through data disaggregation. Gender budgets for instance can help in gathering disaggregated data, so it can help linking the local, national and regional level with the aggregated global dimension. In regions like ours, where data collection is not as strong, one of the measures or policy strategies could be to strengthen the capacity of the national statistical commissions.