

Women at the front line of climate change take action for system change

There's no sign that the Paris outcome will deliver systems change needed to resolve the interlocking crises of climate and inequality. Civil society is using their collective power to shape a sustainable future, and explore options for addressing gender dimensions at local & national level.

Nov. 30, 16.45 – 18:15 at UNFCCC COP21, Le Bourget, Room 04 (tbc)

Speakers

Maria Theresa Lauron, IBON International

Climate change as the manifestation of gross inequalities between countries; between the rich and poor, and between men and women

Toan Tran, Sustainable Rural Development

Building movements as part of system change and participatory democracy

Gotelind Alber, GenderCC – Women for Climate Justice

Gender perspective on urban climate policies as part of system change

Titi Soentoro, Aksi! Indonesia

Financing system change –new economic governance for just economic system

Kate Lappin, APWLD / Women & Gender Constituency

Women demand system change from world leaders in Paris

Facilitator: Ulrike Röhr, LIFE e.V.

Co-hosted by:

